

MARCH 7th

On this day in...

2012: Strong onshore winds hit the Anza Borrego Desert. Wind gusts reached 63 mph at Borrego Springs and 62 mph at Ocotillo Wells. Property damage resulted to homes, park structures, and RVs. A golf cart was hurled into a mobile home.

2000: A waterspout was observed ten miles west of San Clemente and a funnel cloud was two miles west of La Jolla.

1992: A series of storms that began on 3/1 and ended on this day brought one to four inches of rainfall and local flooding.

1972: It was 80° in Big Bear Lake, the highest temperature on record for March.

1968: Heavy rain that began on 3/6 ended on 3/8. One drowning death resulted. There was local flooding and damage to buildings, homes, and schools, including homes in Ontario and Chino on this day. Debris flows closed several highways. Lightning struck three citrus trees in southwest San Bernardino County.

1964: Two waterspouts were observed, one off Oceanside and one off La Jolla.

1952: 2.40 inches of rain fell in San Diego starting on this day and ending on 3/8, the greatest 24-hour amount on record for March. It rained 3.42 inches in Santa Ana on this day, the greatest daily amount on record for March.

This double rainbow was caught on camera in north Oceanside on this day in 2010.